Arabian Tumblers and C'Dora Get Applause on Opening Night.

In its program of free feature acts, the State Fair shines this year like a star of the first magnitude. No collection like it has ever been brought to the city. The performance before the grandstand last night, following a day the city. The performance before the grandstand last night, following a day of indifferent entertainment by a Midway far from complete, was the distinct surprise of the day.

To begin with, the fireworks were all the press agents said, and more. It was the last number on the free list, and sent the crowd away with a good taste in the mouth. The Battle of Lake Erie was the central feature. A canvas ocean that looked remarkably lifelike under the special illumination provided a setting for a dozen miniature war vessels which sailed up and down the waters, pouring broadsides into hostile ships and fortifications.

Exhibition Pleases Crowd.

When, after afteen minutes of steady cannonade, the enemy's fleet—to the last ship—had sunk out of sight amid much red fire and loud detonation, the Mace-Gay Band struck up "The Star-Spangled Banner," and the grandstand responded promptly with a round of applause. The exhibition continued

Mace-tray hand a spandstand responded promptly with a round of applause. The exhibition continued some time longer with a first-class assortment of special pieces which pleased the crowd.

C'Dora, she who flirts with death, made good. In dizzy ascending spirals she circled on a motorcycle inside of a specially constructed steel mesh globe while men and women held their breath. Hassen Ben Ali's Arab troupe scored a particular hit with the classicat exhibition of tumbling ever seen at the Fair, Madame Calvert sang with good effect and received the plaudits of the throng.

Virginis's Wealth on Display.

While these and other features served to distract and amuse, the opening day was properly dedicated to the inspection and appraisal of the various exhibits. These were ranged in every form of attractive display, and were surrounded all day by admiring crowds. The wealth of the State, garnered from every county between the mountains and the sea, was here gathered tagged, labeled, manicured and preened, and thousands of Virginians and visitors from other States passed in all day review.

The county building was crowded until late at night. Forty-two counties have this year installed exhibits displaying the products of their husbandry. Each is in charge of a demonstrator from the county who undertakes willingly to supply any information that is not at once apparent from

A large section in the northern end of the county exhibits building is devoted to the girls' county clubs, which have on display everything that can be packed in glass and tin. The exhibition is in charge of Miss Ella Agnew. State demonstrator of girls' work, who stated yesterday that eleven counties are represented this year, as compared with only four last year.

At 3:30 o'clock to-morrow afternoon groups of five girls, representing as many counties, will contest with one another in an exhibition of scientific canning. Each group will be given a bushel of tomatoes to peel, cook, can and label. The team which prepares the raw product for market in the most approved form and in the least time will receive the prize.

Record Cattle Exhibit.

The cattle pens, according to those who know about these things, are filled to overflowing with the best of domestic and fancy breeds. The dairy and beef classes are well represented. Glamt black Galloways are present in large number, and there is a whole city block of Red Polls. Shorthorns, Herefords and Jerseys are plentiful.

His swineship, the hog, is represented by an array which was never so extensive. The fancy breeds are present in good number, but the giant Berkshires, both black and white, and the Poland Chinas form the most numerous classes. The humble sheep is not quite so well represented, but a large flock of Shopshires, Southdowns and Lincolns attest that Virginia is not facing a famine in wool.

Around the horse stables there ranged all day a crowd which only dispersed when nightfall caused bedlam to break loose in the Midway. The largest array of horses ever gathered at the State Fair is housed in the in-
